Army Soldier Show Makes Stop In Stuttgart

Would you enjoy an evening of talented soldier-performers proclaiming their patriotism on stage under the spotlight? The Army soldier show both rocks the house and moves audiences with outstanding talent and music. The event, which is free and open to the Stuttgart community, promises to entertain all ages and is a perfect way for a family to spend some time together.

When the curtains part 7:30 p.m. June 4 at Panzer Fitness Center Gym, the first notes of Reba McIntyre's "What If" will ring out. This year's show theme, "What If?," pays tribute to soldiers' dreams come true and honors Irving Berlin, Congressional Gold Medal winner and famous composer.

To mark the anniversary, the extravaganza will have musical elements from shows of the past two decades, including remembrances of world wars I and II. But there will also be current hits such as "My Heart Will Go On" from Titanic. And, of course, no soldier show would be complete without its Broadway-style production numbers. This year the group promises to rock the house by performing amazing dance and rhythm breaks from Bring in Da Noise, Bring in Da Funk and Stomp.

For more info about this free event call 0711-729-2796. No tickets are required and all seating is on a first-come, first-serve basis.
